

Education: English

Teachers can create relevant local maps to use in the classroom. In this case, children may be asked to write detailed directions for walking from Sally's home to Daniel's home. Alternatively, they may be given written directions and asked to plot the route themselves.

The task may be expanded to allow children to plot routes themselves and then write detailed directions for those routes. These directions can then be tested by their classmates.